Human beings have the ingrained belief in the one God alone being in charge of the Universe and creating the Universe, etc.

Muslims quote simple arguments from the Qur'aan to show that denying the Creator is illogical.

The Qur'aan says about those who do not accept the existence of God:

Were they created by nothing – or were they themselves the Creators?
Or did they create the Heavens and the Earth – no! But they have no firm faith.

[Soorah Toor (52) ayah 35 – 36]

Everything we see around us has to have been made by Someone or something.

Every effect has a cause.<sup>1</sup>

If a child is hit on the back of the head, and then turns around quickly but finds no one there, he will ask: "Who hit me?"

If you tell him: "No one hit you!" he will not accept this.

He will only be happy when he finds out who hit him, so that he can hit him back.

So it is also something built into our nature, that we cannot understand how something cannot have a cause.

If you reflect on the Heavens and the Earth, the alternation of night and day, the systems and order that we see in the universe, the interactions of different creatures with each other, and all of the other signs – then you will find all of these bearing witness to the fact that there is a Creator and Controller of these.

Muslims believe that even those who deny the existence of God, such as the atheists and the communists, affirm this Tawheed ur Ruboobeyah (Oneness of God in terms of His Lordship over the Creation) in their hearts. But what they say and declare does not reflect this inner belief.

If we consider an example of a plane which is about to crash into the sea, and what will be going on in the minds of the people who are on the plane watching the sea come closer and realising that they are living their last few minutes of life – who will not be crying out to God/Allaah/Jehovah or whatever the name for God is in their language, asking Him to save them? No matter how religious or irreligious they had been before that.

However despite the fact that Muslims believe that everyone on the face of the earth accepts Tawheed ur Ruboobeyah, Muslims also say that having this belief is not enough to make you a Muslim. Why is this?

Because in order to become a Muslim, a person has to additionally affirm that only the One True God (called Allaah) has the right to be worshipped.

In Arabic, this is called Tawheed ul Uloohiyah (the Uniqueness of Allaah in terms of his right to be worshipped).

The belief that Allaah controls the Universe and has created the Universe is separate and different from the belief that all worship should be directed towards Allaah.

Indeed in the time of Muhammad (may Allaah's peace and blessings be upon him), the people of polytheism used to affirm that only One God had created the whole universe.

The Qur'aan says:

Say (to them, the polytheists) - "Who is the Lord of the seven heavens and the Lord of the Great Throne?"

They will say – "Allaah!"

Say "Will you not then fear Allaah?"

Say "In Whose Hand is the sovereignty of everything and He protects (everything) but against Whom there is no protector, if you truly know?"

They will say – "All that belongs to Allaah"

[Surah Muminoon (the 23rd chapter) aayat 86 – 89]

But despite this affirmation, these people used to pray to and sacrifice for idols, so Muhammad (may Allaah's peace and blessings be upon him) fought against them – until they accepted that only Allaah should be worshipped.

Muslims consider it very odd and strange that a person can acknowledge that only the One true God controls all the matters in the universe - but that person will then pray to a saint or a dead person to answer his needs.

Yet this is something that is seen in many countries around the world.
